FINANCIAL AID INFORMATION

Chegg

Chegg offers several services, some are free and others require a subscription.  In terms of scholarships, they offer a free scholarship search at https://www.chegg.com/scholarships.

College Board CSS Profile

One of the most comprehensive college and scholarship search engines is sponsored by College Board.  Many universities and colleges now require students to complete a CSS Profile in addition to completing the FAFSA before being considered for financial aid and/or scholarships.  The CSS Profile will be connected to a student's College Board account (used for SAT, AP, and other services).  For more information on creating an account and CSS profile go to https://bigfuture.collegeboard.org/.

FAFSA

If you want to be considered for any financial aid or scholarships, all US citizens will need to complete the FAFSA (Free Application for Federal Student Aid).  It is possible to complete the FAFSA any time after the window opens on October 1st each year through June 30th for the following school-year.  The sooner you apply, the better as funds for grants and work-study run out quickly.  In California, colleges and universities require students to have their FAFSA and Cal Grant verifications completed by March 2nd each year.  For more information please go to the FAFSA website at https://studentaid.gov/.

Fast Web

Fast Web is another one-stop-shop for college searches, internships, and scholarships.  This service is also free to high school students.  For more information go to https://www.fastweb.com/.

FinAid!

FinAid! is a free and comprehensive college and scholarship search engine.  Unlike some other search engines, FinAid! works hard to provide unbiased information, as well as objective advice about the college application and financial aid application process.  There are also a number of tools and resources for students to explore at
